Final Comments & Questions

What I appreciate about this thesis in the first place is the author's own original choice of film material related to the issue of immigration. His grasp of fundamental principles concerning the problematics is also rather convincing. Although some of the secondary sources could arguably be referred to directly rather than using their Czech translation, it is just a minor diversion from a standard academic procedure. The incorporation of a specific Czech view of the issue in the form V. Klaus' publication seems to be an interesting enrichment. Likewise, the illustrative photo material included in the appendix is also a proof of the author's conscientious and enthusiastic approach to the task. Suggested grade: 1.
