Final Comments & Questions

It was a pleasure to supervise this thesis on the Irish language and its relationship with English in the period 1890–1930. The student displayed independence, creativity and critical discrimination when working on it, and the results are clear. He dealt sensitively with the complex historical and cultural context. This is challenging because there was little in the student's BA studies that would have prepared him to explore Ireland's culture and history. To adjust Neville Chamberlain, it is a far away country of which little is known. Thus, I have no reservations or criticism of this BA thesis.

Tá moladh mór tuilte dó as a shaothar!

I recommend the grade of excellent/výborně/thar barr.
